PREFACE.

As early as 1897 MRS. ELIZABETH F. LANE was asked for a summary statement of her American ancestry, for use in a genealogy of the Lanes of Killingworth and Wolcott, Conn. Neither she nor her husband were satisfied with the meagre and half-authenticated results procurable at such short notice. MR. LANE designed a second and improved edition of the "Lane-Griswolds," and also a similar work for the FERRIER-VANDEROEF-WISNER ancestors and descendants. His early death deprived MRS. LANE of an invaluable coadjutor in her compilation. Within three years afterward both her parents were called from labor to rest. Their personal and local knowledge had contributed much of value to her work.

At an early stage of her inquiries MRS. LANE found that MR. WILLIAM JAMES HANCOCK (then of Wyoming, now of Wilkes-Barre) had already been moved by the ever uneasy spirit of genealogy; and from him she learned much that tended to give fullness and consequent genealogical value to her compilation. The contents of pages 7 to 27 show that among the needs of the hour are some more general accounts of the several families there shown merely in their relationships to one of their mother-lines,—to them already but a part of their remoter ancestry.

Late in 1905 the results of a long and variously-baffled effort were sent to Elkhorn for such re-arrangement as might be found expedient, and for printing. Some then yet unanswered inquiries delayed type-setting, and later circumstances hastened the work somewhat to its hurt. But nothing yet printed can be genealogy's last word. Besides, if printing must await absolute fullness of knowledge and flawlessness of editorial judgment, genealogy's first word must be postponed indefinitely. Generally, it is better to have tried and erred than not to have tried at all. Notwithstanding some proof-reader's oversights, it is believed that the dates are very generally printed as received. Errors in historical statement are not unlikely, but such will not mislead better-informed readers. To be at once genealogist and historian is to carry a double load, one which is likely enough to round the shoulders of a wight not too well trained for either function.

The included non-Ferrier ancestries are not without interest, and, though not all of them verified for use here, are probably most of them correct in substance. If not new to genealogists, they serve to show these families in their relationships to the now numerous and widely dispersed families descended from the immigrating FERRIER. There is more than one purpose served by printing MR. LANE'S ancestor-list, as at pages 44 to 47. Twenty of these families were also the editor's ancestors, and the "Lane-Griswolds" had some need both of correction and addition. It may be seen that the question-mark is used at the names of John Crane and George Griswold, though both have seemed to be good enough hypothetical forefathers.

The doubt suggested in foot-note at page 19, and that other doubt which might seem implied by omission of transatlantic pedigrees are not meant ungraciously. But fiercer light beats not upon thrones than now falls upon longevity statements; and these flaw-revealing rays no more permit the stride across the wide flood of years which rolled between Hastings-field and Jamestown, Plymouth Rock, or Saybrook Point to pass, without questioning, for genealogical verity. If but one ancestor in the long line of one's descent from Japheth is wanting or is unverifiable, genealogy must begin at such point; though the winged family faith may fly straightway and swiftly to its high mark, while proof-fettered doubt creeps endlessly among discontinuous and illegible records.

Compiler and editor have many kindly-helpful correspondents to thank thus briefly but unfeignedly; for, without their effective aid not even such foundation as this for a worthier FERRIER memorial could have been laid.

Elkhorn, April 30, 1906. B.

THOMAS FERRIER

AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

Among the names of Duke William's followers to the conquest and spoliation of Saxon England, according to Bromton and Leland lists, (as shown in Augustin Thierry's "Norman Conquest of England,") are "Ferers" and Fererers." These, with "Ferrers" and "Ferrier," may be variant forms of one name; for it was long afterward that family names, generally speaking, assumed something like fixed spelling, or even pronunciation. When it is recalled what havoc is made in popular speech with many names and commoner words, and what ingenuities of spelling are found in latest as well as in earliest records and other scribe-performances, a natural distrust arises as to the soundness of etymology offered for many a title-name in the ever-widening expanse of printed genealogy. Few of us can say how our earliest surnamed forefathers really spoke their newly-chosen or newly-imposed names, or to what mispronunciations they answered, or to what complications of pen-strokes they assented by touching the quill.[11] Hence, it is not certain that the first man surnamed Ferrier was a worker in iron, and thence a horse-shoer, and thence a farrier. In its primitive form the name may have been a Celtic harshness of sounds, softened by Norman tongues into accidental resemblance to a [11] Similarities and differences of spelling are alike liable to mislead. For an instance, the Treat genealogist found at Trull and other parishes in Somersetshire both identity and difference of family among recorded names of Tratt, Trayte, Treat, and Trott; and this confusion made it impossible to carry back the Connecticut colonist's ancestors by more than four steps.

Franco-Latin word which did not translate it. However great the service of etymology in finding or divining the origins and relationships of words in our commoner speech, it affords but a faint or delusive light on the first naming of many families.

Some branches or families of the now numerous posterity of a remote ancestor still find it useful or agreeable to differentiate themselves from the mass of their kindred of their father-name or their accidental namesakes. This, by return to some real or supposed archaic form of the name; by conforming its spelling to some English or American anomaly of pronunciation; or by a pleasing and wholly modern arrangement of letters. It is a genealogical task to find, as well as may be, among earlier clerical semi-illiteracies and later variations, the true and the most probable kinships.

In no long time after the conquest a Ferrers or Ferrier was granted "as ferriage," rights in part or all of the counties of Kent, Leicester, Norfolk, Rutland, Warwick, and Haddington; and by marriage with a Hamilton, North Britain (Scotland) was added. Since crossing the channel the Ferrier name has been well established in England, Scotland, and Ireland; but not all the Ferriers were or are of Great Britain. The record of the English church at Leyden shows that Samuel Ferrier, of Caen, (Normandy), married Mildreth Charles, May 16, 1614, and he is named in Drake's "Founders of New England" as a passenger to America. It is therefore likely that he has now many American descendants.

THOMAS[1] FERRIER, according to generally concurrent family traditions, was born in 1705, and came from Ireland (of which country it is believed he was a native, but of French Protestant parents) while yet a young man. It is told that the vessel by which he sailed was nine months out at sea and that the passengers were for a long time placed on a scant allowance of food, and were threatened and in other way treated insolently.[12]

[12] "Starved and robbed by the ship's master." See art. "CLINTON," in Johnson's Cyclopaedia. The Ferrier account adds that the passengers so far resisted the skipper's behavior as to choose Col. Clinton to conduct the vessel to port; but the crew durst not obey his directions, lest they might be held guilty of mutiny and piracy.

Extortion seems the half-piratical master's most probable object in this strange course. Col. Charles Clinton, (father of George and James, of Revolutionary fame, and grandfather of De Witt Clinton) sailed May 20, 1729, by the "George and Anne," from Ireland for Philadelphia. The incidents of his similarly prolonged voyage (or cruise), as described in his carefully kept diary, (now in the State Library at Albany), so far coincide with the Ferrier story as to make it evident that Col. Clinton and Mr. Ferrier were fellow-passengers. It is known that some or several of Col. Clinton's relatives came with him, and there are Ferrier descendants who are convinced that their ancestor was one of these kinsmen. At last the sorely tried passengers were landed at Cape Cod. In 1731 Clinton removed to Little Britain, then in Ulster, now in Orange Co., N. Y., and Mr. Ferrier to the same county. THOMAS FERRIER married HESTER LUCKY before 1757, — perhaps several years earlier. The four children named below may have been the younger survivors of a larger family. THOMAS died in Orange Co., April 1, 1792. HESTER is said by one tradition to have come from Holland; (but, probably, was not Dutch); by another, in no way consistent with this, she was a fellow-passenger with THOMAS by the "George and Anne, in 1729. In latter case she was then but a child of ten years or younger, brought with her parents or near kindred to fulfil a destiny then unimagined. The family name is not unknown in the Wyoming valley, for Moses Lucky witnessed a deed of gift from Benjamin Carpenter, of Kingston, Penn, to his son, James Carpenter, Jan'y 25, 1799. HESTER's birth can not well be placed earlier than 1720. She died March 17, 1796. The order of children's birth is as yet not certainly known, but it is here assumed, provisionally, on fair inference from scanty evidence, to have been as follows: —

2. Hester,[2] married to Benjamin Carpenter.
3. Jane, married to Rev. Anning Owen.
4. Robert, born Oct. 9, 1762; married Mary Wilcox, March 9, 1785.
5. Sarah, born Aug. 17, 1767; married to David Perkins.

HESTER[2] FERRIER, (Thomas[1]), was evidently the eldest of the four known children of her parents, and by so many years as to remove suspicion of an omitted generation between them and herself. She was married to BENJAMIN CARPENTER, who was born Jan'y 27, 1750; took part, in 1775, in the earliest movements of Orange county patriots, and his name, with that of Anning Owen, is found among the signatures to the "Revolutionary Association Pledge."[13] He removed, not much later, to the Connecticut settlement in the Wyoming country, and, with Anning Owen and Rogers Searle,[14] did each a soldier's duty in the battle of July 3, 1778, but escaped that wholesale murder which nearly depeopled the valley. He came again, with other survivors, to make more than good the waste wrought in a day of Seneca's vengeance and Tory's devilish hate; and he at once found his place among the most useful and honored citizens of his county. In 1787 he was duly commissioned as justice of the peace, and in 1794 he represented Luzerne in the legislature of Pennsylvania. In his later years he removed again, (probably with most of his children), in 1807, to Sunbury, Delaware Co., Ohio, where he became an associate judge of one the county or district courts, and where he died Sept. 27, 1823. [From her granddaughter, Mrs. Van Fleet, it is learned (too late to recast this paragraph) that MRS. HESTER (FERRIER) CARPENTER was born March 11, 1852, and died on her eighty-fourth birthday, March 11, 1836.] The number of their children is not known, but information from Pennsylvania and Ohio discloses nine, as named below, their order not shown. A few of their descendants, it is said, yet live in Ohio. Children (CARPENTER): —

James, married Elizabeth Hewitt, March 1, 1798. [Capt. Dethick Hewitt, her father, was killed or murdered at Wyoming, July 3-4, 1778.]

Kitty, (or Catherine),[3] married Dec. 6, 1797 to Jacob Bedford; no children known.

Benjamin.

Robert. A daughter, Mrs. Lucy Van Fleet, lives at Galena, Ohio.

Charles.

Mary, married to Rufus Carter.

Christina, married to Thomas Perfect.

---

[13] There seems ground for belief that a second Benjamin Carpenter, who signed the same paper, was our BENJAMIN'S father; and he have been he who married Prudence Kingsbury, July 1738.

[14] Rogers Searle's descendant. Mrs. Katherine Searle Macartney, Wilkes-Barre, has studied well the annals of Wyoming Valley and the official and household records of its pioneer families. To her resourcefulness much matter of historic interest and genealogical value, in these pages, is due.

6. Elizabeth, married Feb. 14, 1802 to Lazarus Denison.
7. Sarah, married in 1812 to John S. Brown.

JANE[2] FERRIER, (Thomas[1]), was married to ANNING OWEN, probably at her father's home. She was well endowed, as it is told, with whatever qualities of mind and character, added to wholesome instruction and influences of her earlier home-life, would best fit her to meet the duties and privations which must have made up in large part the sum of her career as a pioneer clergyman's wife. MR. OWEN was born in New York, (perhaps in Orange Co.), in 1751. He is said to have been of an early-coming New England family, as is not unlikely. In 1775 he, with Gershom, John, and Jonathan Owen, signed the patriotic Pledge. Before 1778 he had gone to the Wyoming country, where he built a house and blacksmith shop between Kingston and Forty Fort. He fought well in the famous action, but with Carpenter and Searle escaped murder by hiding under a grape-vine, (drooping from a tree), on the bank of the river, near the mouth of Shoemaker's creek. They saw from their shelter the wretch, Windecker, kill Shoemaker, whose body floated down below them. Returning for a time to New York he became a Methodist, afterward was licensed to preach, and, going again to Wyoming, he led the first Methodist class at Rose Hill, in 1788. In 1795 he became a travelling preacher, and his labors lay in several circuits of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware. He was presiding elder of the Susquehanna district, which, as understood, included the counties of Lycoming and Centre. His family, in all this time, had lived at Kingston, and partly self-supporting; for JANE and her daughters knew well how to adjust their shoulders to the burdens of their time and circumstances, and had strength and will to sustain them patiently and cheerfully to the end. In 1810 he removed with his family to Ulysses, Tompkins Co., N. Y., where he died, of a then prevailing epidemic, in April, 1814. JANE died twelve hours later. Daughters are known to have lived at least until young womanhood, but their names have not been learned.

Benjamin, died early.
Sarah, died early.
Christiana,(?) married to Engelbert Hartshough, Jan'y 18, 1807.

Elizabeth,(?) married to John Shaw, Feb. 23, 1807. [These four persons were of Kingston ; but it is uncertain that they are truly placed here.]

ROBERT[2] FERRIER, (Thomas[1]), was born Oct. 9, 1762 ; married MARY WILCOX, March 9, 1785 ; died in town of Warwick, Orange Co., Jan'y 6, 1822. MARY was born Sept. 3, 1764 ; died at Dundee, Yates Co., N. Y., March 2, 1836. ROBERT's land lay in Warwick, between the villages of Amity and Edenville. He must have owned a considerable tract ; for, in later years, some of his children and grandchildren owned and occupied farms adjoining the old home-farm on either side. Children, born in Warwick : —

9. William,[3] born Nov. 2, 1786 ; married Hannah Samons.
10. Anna, born Jan'y 25, 1788 ; married to Daniel Nanny.
11. Joseph, born Jan'y 25, 1791 ; m'd 1. Hannah Edsall ; 2. Mrs. Harriet (Houston) Young.

Thomas, born June 7, 1793 ; died in 1873.

12. David, born Dec. 17, 1795 ; married Eliza Cain.
13. Hester, born March 9, 1798 ; married to Samuel Conklin.
14. Elizabeth, born July 27, 1800 ; married to David Carr.
15. Robert, born Sept. 23, 1802 ; married Emily Toby.
16. Michael J., born Feb. 27, 1805 ; married Mary Ann Neighbor.

Sarah M., born May 27, 1807 ; died Jan'y 26, 1821.

SARAH[2] FERRIER, (Thomas[1]), born Aug. 17, 1767 ; married to DAVID PERKINS ; died January 1, 1845, "aged seventy-seven years and five months," as reads her tombstone at Forty Fort, Luzerne Co., Penn.,— a harmless inaccuracy. John Perkins[16] went from Plainfield, Windham Co., Conn., in 1769, to Wyoming valley[17] among its earlier settlers, and there owned much land. He took with him his wife and sons John, Aaron, and

---

[16] It is believed, but as yet not proved, that John Perkins's father was of Norwich, Conn., and was a great-grandson of John and Judith, who came from Gloucestershire to Boston in 1636.

[17] The Connecticut contention for jurisdiction westward, through northern Pennsylvania and Ohio to the Pacific (which at first was thought not much beyond the great lakes) did not die out wholly until some years later than the Revolution. The Wyoming country was then the town of Westmoreland, and was accounted, by its pioneers and also in Connecticut, a part of Litchfield county, and was represented in the legislature of the latter colony. Col. Zebulon Butler, and other officers of Valley troops, were commissioned by Gov. Jonathan Trumbull.

DAVID,—the last-named born Jan'y 2d of that year. Having served in Capt. Spalding's company, under Washington, he had returned to share in the disaster of July 1778, in which his eldest boy was killed; but saved himself and the rest of his family from massacre, and went back, it is told, to Connecticut. He soon returned, alone, and meeting a gang of Indian prowlers, he was murdered and scalped. His widow remained in Connecticut and was married to a Mr. Griswold. Aaron was a soldier, and in old age a pensioner. DAVID also abode in Connecticut until about 1787, when he returned to the Valley, and chose for his guardian, Sept. 6th of that year, Benjamin Carpenter, who administered John Perkins's estate. The Orphan's Court of Luzerne county, March 6, 1789, ordered sale of as much of this estate as was needful to pay debts and cost of administration. DAVID seems to have become for some time an inmate of the Carpenter home, where he met SARAH FERRIER, then visiting her sister. Not much later, he journeyed to the Ferrier home at Amity and brought back SARAH as his wife. He became in time the owner of a tract of land six miles along the Susquehanna and one mile back to the mountains,—nearly four thousand acres. This land then included the site of the monument which commemorates the tragedy of 1778. DAVID PERKINS was a man of local influence and usefulness as well as of many acres. He was a member of the first school-committee for the town of Westmoreland. For several years he held by executive appointment the then dignified as well as important post of justice of the peace. His second wife, with whom he lived but short time, was Mrs. Sarah Pettibone. He died Jan'y 8, 1854. Children (PERKINS), in supposed order of birth:—

17. Zibia,[3] born Aug. 21, 1790; married to Elisha Atherton, Aug. 1825.
18. John, born in 1792; married Eunice Miller.
19. James, born in 1796; married Clarissa Hasbrouck Browne.
20. David.
    Thomas, probably died young.
    Esther, married Dr. Rensselaer Wells, who removed to Illinois.
21. Sarah, married to Giles Slocum.
22. Mary, born in 1802; married to James Hancock, Dec. 25, 1828.
    Jane Ann, married to Balser Carpenter; died before July, 1850.
    A child, name unknown: died early.

Sophronia drowned at the age of about four years.
23. Elizabeth, born March 5, 1812; married to John C. Grier, June 24, 1834.

ELIZABETH[3] CARPENTER, (Hester,[2] Thomas[1]), was married Feb. 14, 1802 to LAZARUS[6] DENISON, (Col. Nathan,[5] Nathan,[4] Joseph,[3] George,[2 1]), whose ancestors were among the earliest at Stonington, Conn., and whose kinsfolk were many times intermarried with the genealogically best known families of New London county. Other old Stonington names are found in the records and chronicles of the Valley. Children[4] (DENISON):—

Hiram,[4] born Jan'y 9, 1803; died in 1868; unmarried.
Mary,[4] born Sept. 22, 1804; married to Chauncey A. Reynolds; a son,—
Lazarus Denison,[5] born July 1, 1833; died July 25, 1858.
Wayman,[4] born April 21, 1806; died in Sept. 1828; unmarried.
Nathan,[4] born May 22, 1808; died in 1834; unmarried.
Benjamin C.,[4] born July 22, 1810; married Frances Johnson.
a. Elizabeth,[4] born April 20, 1812; married to William Hancock.
b. Sarah,[4] born March 12, 1814; married to Gilbert Reilay.
c. Charles,[4] born Jan'y 23, 1816; married Ellen E. Hulings.

— 6*a* —

ELIZABETH DENISON,[4] born April 20, 1812; married to WILLIAM HANCOCK, son of Jonathan and Martha (Young) Hancock, in 1847. Children[5] (HANCOCK):—

Hiram D.,[5] born Feb. 9, 1850; married Sara Irvin, of Lewisburg; died July 25, 1898; children[6] (Hancock):—
Ellen,[6] married to George Raynor.
Elizabeth Denison, married to ——— Bowman; died Dec, 18, 1905.
Mary.
William.

Ellen E.,[5] born June 30, 1851; married Jan'y 9, 1873 to Oscar Moore, son of William Lyman Lance and Frances (Mitchell) Rose, of Philadelphia; lives at Kingston; children[6] (Lance):—
Oscar Moore,[6] born at Norfolk, Va., Oct. 3, 1873; died at Kingston, Feb. 27, 1905; unmarried.
John Hancock, born Jan'y 21, 1876; consulting engineer, at Kingston.
Elizabeth Denison, born June 28, 1877.
Katharine Blair, born Sept. 23, 1879.
Mary Hancock, born Oct. 22, 1881; died March 29, 1882.
Ruth Mitchell, born Nov. 21, 1883.
Emily Hancock, born Feb. 8, 1886; died April 19, 1886.
William Lyman, born March 19, 1887.
Hiram Hancock, born July 18, 1889; died Jan'y 1, 1891.

Emily J.,[5] born Jan'y 12, 1853; married to Rev. Simon Peter Hughes, of Williamsport, in 1886. He was a son of William Hughes and Eve

Bamberger; born near Charleston, S. C., July 20, 1844; died June 21, 1904, at Williamsport, Penn. Children[6] (Hughes),—

Eve Elizabeth Denison,[6] born Sept. 7, 1888, at Williamsport.

Emily Hancock, born May 27, 1893, at Red Hook, N. Y.

—6*b*—

SARAH DENISON,[4] born March 12, 1814; married March 8, 1838 to GILBERT REILAY, son of John Reilay and Catherine Vanderpoel and grandson of John Reilay and Kathleen Vandenburg); children[5] (REILAY):—

Eliz beth,[5] born Feb. 12. 1839; married to Dr. John S. Pfouts: son,—

Gilbert[6] Pfouts, born March 15, 1864; married Helen Jarvis: son,—

Charles Yale[7] Pfouts, born at Salt Lake City.

Charles H.,[5] born July 12, 1842; died May 10, 1864.

Chauncey, born Feb. 10, 1847; died Aug. 22, 1848.

Kate, born Aug. 10, 1851; married to Dr. Charles Hasbrouck Denniston, of New York, Sept. 3, 1889.

Richard B. born Nov. 20, 1853; m'd Sallie E. Wild, Jan'y 2, 1879; dau.,—

Sarah[6] Reilay, born Aug. 18, 1887.

Anna Denison, born July 22, 1856; married to William Henry Thorne, of Birchrunville, Chester Co., Penn.

—6*c*—

CHARLES DENISON[4] born Jan'y 23, 1816; married ELLEN E. HULINGS May 7, 1845; died June 27, 1867. In 1862 he was elected representative in 38th Congress for the XIIth Pennsylvania district, (Luzerne and Susquehanna counties), over Galusha A. Grow; in 1864 to the 39th Congress over Winthrop W. Ketcham; in 1866 to the 40th Congress over Mr. Archibald, but he died at Wilkes-Barre, a few weeks after the close of his second term. MR. DENISON was educated at Dickinson College, and he was by profession a lawyer. Children[5] (DENISON):—

Charles,[5] born April 12, 1846; married Mathilde Reinhart.

David, born Aug. 28, 1848; died Aug. 28, 1850.

Elizabeth, born Oct. 11, 1851; married to Mr. Brett, of Ryde, Isle of Wight, England.

Henry G., born Jan'y 28, 1854; died April 6, 1856.

Maria, b. Nov. 13, 1856; m'd to a son of Sir Hugh Dailey, Indore, India.

Hiram, born May 21, 1859; died July 31, 1863.

Mary, born May 20, 1861; married to Richard Winslow (now deceased).

WILLIAM HANCOCK,[4] born Aug. 2, 1831 ; married ISABELLA BROWN BARKER, Sept. 25, 1873 ; died at Wilkes-Barre, Feb. 8, 1906. In young manhood he went to California, and returned in middle age. He served several years as auditor of township of Wyoming and as member of the town council. He was first Burgess of Wyoming borough, serving two terms. For many years he was president of the board of trustees of the first Presbyterian church. For his various public services he never accepted salary or fee, but paid his official expenses from his own purse. In business he was scrupulously just, an indulgent creditor, a generous landlord, a considerate neighbor and friend. ISABELLA'S parents were Abel Gunn Barker (mother, Anna Gunn) and Phœbe Ann Brown. Mr. Barker had some local repute, in his own time, as an inventor and also as a public speaker. Children[5] (HANCOCK): —

Anna Mary,[5] born Feb. 10, 1876 at Wyoming ; was married Oct. 6, 1897 to John Franklin Smith, (son of Miles Gaylord Smith and Anna Barnes and grandson, paternally, of Erastus Smith and Mary Matilda Howard ; maternally, of John Barnes and Anna Cool). He was born at Old Forge, Lackawanna Co., July 21, 1862 ; lives at Wyoming : —

Anna Mary, born July 23, 1901.

Julia Howard, born Jan'y 6, 1905.

William James,[5] born at Wyoming Oct. 23, 1877 ; lives at Wilkes-Barre. [Mr. Hancock's services in the compilation of this work were of more than common kind. The materials he had brought together since 1899 (if not earlier) were most kindly and unreservedly placed at Mrs. Lane's disposal ; nor did his helpfulness end at that instant. His genealogical judgment, as well as his considerable store of facts, names, and dates, have been found most useful.]

Louise Barker, born Sept. 30, 1879 ; lives at Wilkes-Barre.

Mr. Hancock was educated at Kenyon college; degree of A. B. conferred in 1859; A. M. in 1861; Ph. B. K. orator in 1872; Alumni orator in 1900; in 1901, LL. D. After leaving college he became professor of mathematics at Western University, Pittsburg, and at the same time studied law. In 1861 he was admitted to the bar, and practised at Pittsburg until 1865, when he removed to Franklin. From 1879-90, he was successively local and general railway solicitor. In 1883 Mr. Hancock prepared and delivered an address on "Petroleum Protection," for which the Cobden Club awarded its silver medal and conferred on him honorary membership. In 1885 he was delegate to the Free Trade Convention at Chicago, and was member of committee and sub-committee on resolutions, and, (two clauses excepted), drafted report as adopted. In 1887 he was chairman of a similar body at the same city. He wrote a pamphlet on "Evolution of Money," in 1893, which was adopted by the National Board of Trade, and widely circulated by local Boards and through the newspapers. In 1892 he was Democratic nominee, XXVIIth district, for representative in Congress, and in 1894 he was nominated by acclamation for a membership for the State at large,—both candidacies against his refusal and both unsuccessful. In 1896 he served the Sound Money Democracy as delegate to the State and National Conventions,—his latest appearance in politics. In 1904 he was chosen president-general, for one year, of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. He is now a member of the American Free Trade League, of the Civil Service Reform Society, and of the Pennsylvania Forestry Association. Children:—

LANE

[25] One who never met HIRAM W. LANE, nor knew until 1897 that such a man had lived, and who knew him then and thereafter, and still knows him, only from his hundred letters and his photograph, may place here, perhaps, some part of his impressions of a second-cousin who for two years had been more to him than many first-cousins, and little less than a brother. MR. LANE wrote rapidly but never illegibly, with almost reckless unreserve, and with businesslike directness, clearness, and forcefulness. His letters showed that his well-stocked library had not been bought for show, but that a busy man might have books at his elbow for any instant's use or pleasure. But his letters were himself, not his books. His taste in reading was various enough, and his distastes were expressed as freely as the soul of candor could ask. He affected neither wit nor wisdom, but his letters were boyish only in their frankness, and to read them was to drive away blue devils. He bestowed his full, generous trust upon a stranger for the sake of a quarter-blood relationship subsisting. His genealogical interest was keen, and his quick intellect and life-long business habit gave peculiar value to his hearty, whole-handed or both-handed co-operation. The news of his illness was quickly followed by that of his death, and brought to his newly found kinsman an unforecalculated and abiding sense of personal loss.— A. C. B.

[28] Most of the corrections of the "Lane-Griswold" pamphlet, as to its Kelseys and Parmelees, were supplied by the late Miss Clara Louise Sands, of Meriden, Conn., who was of Bradley-Hull-Kelsey-Parmelee descent. Her search for record of the settlement of Lieut. John Kelsey's estate was long and trying, but her triumph over needless obstacles was complete and compensating. Her death, in June 1902, was a sore loss to her genealogical correspondents, as well as to her family. Her valuable collection of books, pamphlets, and manuscripts are now the property of the public library at Meriden.

6. NATHANIEL, born July 15, 1780 ; married Keziah Bedell.
7. Robert, born Aug. 5, 1782 ; died in 1883.
8. Elizabeth, born June 18, 1784.
9. Mahala, born June 25, 1786.
10. Thorn, born Dec. 12, 1794.

2. NATHANIEL, born July 15, 1780; married KEZIAH, daughter of Jeremiah Bedell and Mariam Gildersleeve; died Feb. 5, 1842. Keziah was born April 20, 1782; died Feb. 18, 1863. Children: —

1. HENRY BEDELL, born May 17, 1807; married Jane Marshall.
2. Catherine, born Sept. 15, 1808.
3. Mary, born July 16, 1812, died Feb. 21, 1885.
4. Marian, born June 16, 1818; died July 15, 1880.

3. HENRY BEDELL, born May 17, 1807; married Jane Marshall, Dec. 7, 1832; died Jan'y 16, 1864. Jane, daughter of Totten Marshall and Mary Bell,[29] of Dutchess Co., was born March 14, 1808, at Ballston Springs, Saratoga Co., N. Y. Children: —

1. Josephine, born March 19, 1835; married to Charles French, Sept. 12, 1855. Mr. French was born May 5, 1828; he died June 13, 1899.— Children (French): —
   Estella, born July 19, 1856; died Feb. 9, 1861.
   Edwin Marshall, born March 28, 1868; died Nov. 18, 1868
   Henry Goldin, born March 15, 1863; died Aug. 28, 1873.
2. Floyd, born April 7, 1837; died April 28, 1849.
3. William Henry Harrison, born Oct. 25, 1839; died a prisoner of war, at Andersonville, Sumter Co., Ga.
4. Nathaniel, born Sept. 19, 1842.
5. Catherine Maria, born May 6, 1845; died Jan'y 3, 1848.
6. Byron E., born Nov. 16, 1847; died Nov. 19, 1848.
7. PERCIVAL, born July 28, 1850; married MARY WHEELER FERRIER.
8. Frank Emerson, born Sept. 8, 1852.

Page 8.— Hester[2] Ferrier was born in 1752, not in "1852."

Page 15.— Hildegaard, Hildegonde, or Hillegonde De Kay was daughter of Jacobus De Kay and Sarah Willet. Sarah was daughter of Col. Thomas Willet and Helena, daugh. of Elbert Elbertse Stoothoff.— v. "Edsall."

Page 29.— Warren H., son of Daniel and Anna Nanny, for reason or notion of his own, changed the form of his family name to "Anway," and as understood, all his children adhere to this change. It may be that this was the primitive form of the name. Such changes or restorations are not wholly uncommon in America or elsewhere.

[29] 1. JAMES BELL; wife Sarah. 2. CAPT. JESSE, born at Stamford, Conn., March 1745; served (six enlistments) in Revolution; died Oct. 20, 1834 at Milton, N. Y. 3. MARY, born about 1778; married to Totten Marshall.

Page 37.—MRS. LANE was not born at Florida, but near Edenville. (This inaccuracy appeared, too, in the "Lane-Griswolds.") Both villages are in the town of Warwick, about four miles apart by crow-flight.

Page 40.—Ananias Rogers, born about 1750; is said to have lived on Long Island before 1775; a soldier of Col. Hathorn's regiment (Fourth N. Y.); estate administered in 1806, Among his children were Richard, John, and Augustine Platt.

Page 40.—John W. Vanderoef was born in 1781, not in "1787."
